House rules

In student accommodations where many people live close to each other, it is important to consider other people's needs for peace and order. Please follow the house rules that are part of the lease.

Section 1. Fire, safety

1. The tenant is obliged to familiarize themselves with the article 'Fire safety' at <https://www.sio.no/en/housing/everyday-life/fire-safety>. The tenant shall observe due caution in their use of naked flame, heat sources, hotplates etc. to prevent the risk of fire or call-out of the fire services.
2. Escape routes (i.e. staircases and corridors) must be kept free of obstacles at all times in case of fire. It is prohibited to block fire doors (doors marked as exits or emergency exits) or to leave these propped open. The security officer will remove any objects blocking escape routes without notice.
3. The tenant is personally responsible for replacing batteries in smoke alarms and for otherwise ensuring that smoke alarms are in proper working order. The tenant must notify the landlord immediately on suspicion of any defective smoke alarm.
4. The tenant is not permitted to store any items that might pose a risk to other persons whether in the tenant's own accommodation unit, common areas, outdoor areas or in storage space. The landlord will remove any such items without notice.
5. If the tenant's conduct results in needless call-out of the fire services, including as a result of food preparation, the tenant is liable to pay damages to cover the landlord's expense incurred by needless call-out; see Section 5-8 of the Norwegian Tenancy Act. The tenant is billed according to the invoice from the electrician.

Dismantling or cover up of fire alarms is strictly prohibited and will be construed as a breach of the tenancy agreement. The tenant is also required to pay the labor cost of repairing faults in installations resulting from such dismantling. Tenant is billed according to invoice from the fire department.
